A Hibernian Bank Incident--A Woman that Wanted Her Money.

By Louis Demerouti.

The news of the suspension of the banks of the city, published in the papers, created intense excitement in Kerry Patch. The thrifty population of that classic precinct are in the habit of depositing their meagre earnings in the savings banks, and anything that casts a shadow upon those useful institutions throws a gloom over the Patch. The first duty performed yesterday in Kerry, after feeling the pig and milking the goat, was to go down town and look after the deposits in bank. One determined woman took her station in front of the Hibernian bank, and patiently waited on the sidewalk for two hours, until she saw the doors opened. Then she entered with a firm step, and addressing young Tansie said, in a voice of thunder:

"Is this bank suspended?"

"Yes, madam, but only temporarily."

"Temporarily, is it? I know what a temporary suspension is--it means gone up. I've got $200 deposited in this bank, and I want my money."

"Well, madam, you need not talk so loud. Give me your pass book, and you shall have your money."

"Have you got it?"

"Yes, I've got it. Hand out your pass book."

"Are you sure you've got my $200 safe and sound?"

"Yes, here it is. Don't make so much noise."

"I've got a right to make a noise. I worked hard for that $200, and do you think I'm going to lose it without making a noise?"

"I tell you your $200 is not lost; here, take it away, and don't talk so loud."

"You've got it, have you?"

"Yes; I tell you it is here."

"My $200?"

"Yes, your $200; take it and go."

"What do I want with it? Didn't I put it here for safe keeping?" and the depositor launched into a lengthy and loud harangue on banks and bankers, attracting a crowd around the door. One of the directors, finding the woman could not be silenced, called in a policeman, who took her by the arm for the purpose of leading her out.

"Is it the likes of you that dares to lay the weight of your dirty claws on a decent woman with $200 in the bank? Get out of this and leave me alone, ye spalpeen--I'm a decent woman, G-d--you."

At this moment the president of the bank entered, and, learning the cause of the disturbance, ordered the woman to be released, and invited her politely to take a seat.

"I don't want to sit down. I've got $200 in this bank, and I'm used to standing."

"Madam, I think you had better take your money."

"Have you got it?"

"Yes, here is your money."

"What do you take me for? I put my money in this bank for safe keeping, and be daid I'm not goin' to be forced to take it away. This is a bank of deposit, and I'm a depositor--do you mind that?"

It was in vain that the depositor was urged to draw her money. She would neither take it nor remain silent. After standing an hour or two longer, and talking all the time at a furious rate, she remembered that her children had not had their breakfast, and with many a protest against the attempt to force a poor woman to draw her money, she wended her way back to Kerry Patch, and in front of the Hibernian bank was only today, and had not suspended at all.

One of Mr. Lincoln's Speeches.

Extract from Gen. Sherman's after-dinner speech at the reunion of the army of the Cumberland in Pittsburg: "There are a thousand episodes I might relate, to-night, but I will confine myself to one or two; and one is a little thing which happened in the early part of the war, when I was a member of the army of the Potomac--for you know I fought, and was whipped at Bull Run. We had fallen back to the Potomac, and my line was between Georgetown and old Fort Corcoran. One day, I was out inspecting a block-house on my line, when I saw a carriage approaching, drawn by two old hack-horses, and I guessed at once that Lincoln was coming. So I cut across and stood by the road-side as he came up. In answer to my salute, he said, 'Col. Sherman? I am that person,' I said, 'I am out seeing some of the boys,' added the president; 'is this your brigade?' I replied that it was, and he said he would be pleased to visit them if I would show him the way. I escorted him and Mr. Seward, who sat by his side, to the nearest camp, sending a soldier in advance to warn the command of the approach of the President, and cause the assembly to be beaten. Passing along up the hill (Gen. McDowell will remember the road by which we had to ascend), we talked of Bull Run and other matters of military interest, and Mr. Lincoln asked if he might make a speech to the boys. I said I should consider it a favor if he would, and I insisted he would discourage the yelling which was becoming so unpleasantly common among the soldiers. I had the first regiment drawn up in line, and, halting his carriage, Lincoln rose and spoke. Gentlemen, I have heard Clay in his palmiest days; I have heard Crittenden, with his keenest satire; I have heard the best orators, and have marked them well; but I have never heard a man who spoke to the hearts of men as Lincoln spoke to those of the men who stood before him. I remember almost every word he said. He addressed them as children, and said that those were sad days, but better were coming; that the rain had fallen, but the skies would soon be clear; that he would not be discouraged, but think of the to-morrow which awaited them, having faith in the nation and in final success, which would come as surely as there was a God in heaven. That speech reached all hearts, and was worth its weight in diamonds."

Wages in Europe.

After reading such statements as the following, the wonder is, that emigration is not more rapid, but that so many people in European countries manage to scrape enough money together with which to seek more profitable fields of labor:

"Sixty cents a day is considered good wages for a working-man in any of the European countries, except Great Britain, where the wages are somewhat higher. In the Tyrol and in Italy, they often do not get more than ten cents. In the country in Germany ten cents is the common pay. Women there often get but five cents. In Sweden, men often work from four o'clock in the morning till nine in the evening, and do not get any more. During the late war many poor women in Berlin were hired to knit stockings for the soldiers for five cents. The profits of the poor who keep petty shops, sell trinkets in the streets or act as sutlers, do not average more than three or four per cent. Barbers in Berlin, since the raising of their prices, get five cents for hair cut and two and a-half cents for shaving. Servants at hotels get three to eight dollars a month. Servant girls in private families often get ten dollars a year. Sometimes these classes cannot get work at any price."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

CITY NOTES.

The rooms of the National Bank of Rondout are being renovated and redecorated.

Has the Twentieth Regiment been disbanded?

Our city dominates drop in on the Evangelical Alliance pretty numerously. It affords a good chance to improve their style.

We hear it rumored that Keyson will not take the Republican nomination for Judge.

Dimmick, the noted stock operator, is in town. He is going to have his house papered with Washbas maps.

Mr. Chas. A. Dewitt, the General Superintendent of the United States Express Company, was in town on Friday.

Two ladies connected with a Rhinebeck church will visit the city on Friday.

There was a mission to the Shethers.

A good item for panic times. The Freeman's receipts for September this year were $1552 larger than for the corresponding month of last year.

Is this right? One of the inspectors of election in the Fourth Ward can't write!

We should suppose he'd find it inconvenient copying the poll-lists.

The South Rondout boys have formed a Turn Verein, and are turning and twisting at a great rate. They already talk of a tour for next summer.

The Trustees of School District No. 10 want a well on the premises, and will ask authority of the inhabitants of the District on Tuesday night to dig one.

The fact that Parcel, the railroad engineer, has sold out, is taken by some as an indication that the N. Y. & S. R. R. is going to migrate. What weather we are having.

Now we hope the city will go ahead and build a wall on the east side of Hasbrouck avenue at the pond, collecting the lake by a sale of the property. It is time that trap was closed.

How charmingly rural it looks to see the notices for school meetings consist of little pieces of paper stuck on the buildings. Why not advertise them or post printed notices as if the schools were run in a civilized community?

Bayers of R. & O. R. R. bonds are making a distinction between low and high numbers.

The reason is, that equitably these bonds have no business on the market at a higher rate than $200,000 a mile, and there are 26 miles of road uncompleted.

Friday was one of the brightest, most beautiful days of the year, and the air was as intoxicating, beside being much more invigorating, than champagne. The sky was as blue as the waters of the Gulf Stream, the outlines of the landscape were as clearly defined as a well cut cameo, and Autumn in her best colors doled coming Winter, of whose near approach we heard a whisper in the sighing of the northern breeze; and in the night the great round moon flooded the heavens and the earth with a silent, golden glory.

Canal Arrival.

Yesterday 51 canal boats laden with 6,530 tons of coal reached this water at Edenville through the Delaware & Hudson canal.

Captain Cogswell's Condition.

Friends of Captain Cogswell in this city on Friday received the following dispatch from Providence, R. I., which will convey gratifying information to all who know him: "Captain Cogswell's condition not critical, and is improving. He is with a friend on shore."

Death of an Old Boatman.

Thomas Rafferty, an old steam captain, who formerly sailed from Troy, but has lately resided in Baltimore, Md., died on Tuesday of this week at his home in that city. Captain Rafferty was for more than forty years a boatman on the Hudson river.

Interesting to Canal Boatmen.

Engineer Howell of Philadelphia, representing interested owners of canal boats, has laid before President Grant certain charges against the Secretary of the Treasury for refusing to accept three decisions of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland district courts as binding in regard to non-liability of canal boats to license as marine vessels.

Grapes.

On Thursday Sol Crispell, who lives in Huxley, picked the last grapes from the vines in his vineyard. He has raised and sold this year seven tons of grapes beside those which have been given away, and those we estimate would bring the quantity up to seven tons more, for Sol and his family are at least one tittle infatuated, and are "given to hospitality."

A Quick Passage.

The steamer Adeline of the White Star Line, and for which Allanman M. J. Madden, on the corner of Division and Mill streets, is the agent in this city, left Queenstown at 11:30 A. M. Friday the 26th of September, and arrived at New York on Saturday morning the 4th of October at 11:05, having made the passage in seven days, twenty-three hours and thirty-five minutes, apparent time, and eight days, three hours and fifty-seven minutes, mean time. This is one of the quickest passages ever made across the Western ocean and proves the Adeline a fast ship.

Epitaph Debating Society.

The opening debating club held their weekly session Thursday night. There was an increase of members, and the question was debated with more than ordinary zeal. The President decided that education should not be compulsory. For the next debate the following question was chosen: "Resolved, That the printing press has been more effective in enlightening the world than the Christian ministry." The debaters were chosen as follows: Affirmative—George VanRiten, S. D. Soule, G. H. Hill and S. S. Hall. Negative—W. L. Conkling, M. Van Wagener, Ang. Schepmoes and Matthew Bush. The next session will be held on the evening of the 14th inst.

A Present.

On Thursday evening, just before the regular meeting of Cornell House Company at their rooms on Abel street, the Local of The Freeman was presented by that organization with a note book, elegantly bound in Russia leather.

The speeches made on the occasion, if given to the public, would destroy the cherished illusion of the great American people that Daniel Webster and Henry Clay were their most eloquent sons, for the manner in which the President of the Association sent showers of pearls of eloquence before that swine of a scribbler, and the way in which little pig gobbled them up and shot them back again, while he was seeking that note book, would make the story of Ponce de Leon, the reply of Webster to Hayne, and the narrator of the "Mill Boy of the Slashes" turn green with envy—and that's one thing we don't want to do.

ALONG THE RIVER.

Towing on the river is at present very dull. Boats are now being towed between Albany and New York for $5.

F. M. Smith, agent of the Central-Hudson River Railroad at East Albany, was Wednesday evening presented with a handsome gold watch and chain by the employees under his charge.

Up to Wednesday evening 6,524 boats had passed through the West Troy weigh lock since the opening of the canal, and the total receipts for toll were $64,985.54.

The Red Hook Journal states that J. B. Lasher, at Germantown, Columbia county, this year picked 1,604 quarts of Wilson strawberries from 3,300 plants, and received for them in New York, after paying freight and commission, $466.18, or about twenty cents per quart.

About four hundred railroad men, employed in all the various departments between Troy and New York on the Hudson River Railroad, have been discharged during the past four days. The officers of the Hudson River and New York Central Railroad estimated their falling off in westward bound freight at twenty per cent. Of the eastward bound freights they can give no estimate.

The Farmer's Son.

The following "poem" was kindly sent us by our friend Mr. W. A. Armstrong, whose sharp business ability seems to be almost matched by the quantity of the "divine afflatus" looked up within the recesses of his bosom.

We at first suspected some cunning advertisement of the Travelers' Life Insurance Co., of which Mr. A. is the successful special agent, would bounce out of the poetry, like a jack out of a box; but so far we don't say any. The "Moral" is hardly needed, as the doctrine of the poem is plain as a Springfield market.

I'm just 25—been 10 years at work— Saved a cool thousand—But I'd like to shrink: Can't make much up here at home: Guess I'll strike New York for a roam.

They say lots of fellows with a dollar bill Can go in with 'yats' and live on Murray Hill: Father says, "Farm it, Jim—sure of your lands": "York is jammed full of strange quack-sands."

Still, what do we know? Well, much of plough-shares: But naught about Wall street, its Bulls and its Bears: And, you see, I have read "Twenty years in that street": It excited me, so I could scarce stand on my feet: When I finished, I said, "Smith—Bully boy!" Can't make much up here at home: Guess I'll strike New York for a roam.

They say lots of fellows with a dollar bill Can go in with 'yats' and live on Murray Hill: Father says, "Farm it, Jim—sure of your lands": "York is jammed full of strange quack-sands."

Still, what do we know? Well, much of plough-shares: But naught about Wall street, its Bulls and its Bears: And, you see, I have read "Twenty years in that street": It excited me, so I could scarce stand on my feet: When I finished, I said, "Smith—Bully boy!" Can't make much up here at home: Guess I'll strike New York for a roam.
